feature profile

Vacationland News is proud to work with many businesses that service the Lakeland and surrounding area. Feature Profiles, like the one below, give you an inside look at the talented local people behind the business.

Cataclysm Tattoo & Piercing

On July 8th, 2021 the Lakeland area welcomed the opening of transformative services offered by Cataclysm Tattoo and Piercing. Leanne and Mike Thompson-Hill are the dynamic duo behind the new business. They bring twenty-plus years of experience to a brand new private studio located just north of the Christopher Lake junction on Hwy 2. The business itself has been three years in the making, including a year and a half during Covid, which means the process was not without its challenges. They attribute much of their startup success to local 'cheerleaders' who have offered encouragement and support from the get go - neighbours, local contractors and municipal staff.

Like so many Lakelanders, the Thompson-Hill's spent every summer camping in Waskesiu since starting their family nearly 20 years ago - with their daughters, Elizabeth(19), Bella(16), and their dog Ava(11). The couple always envisioned finding a piece of property in the area to retire. After finding one on Kijiji, it didn't take them long to fall in love with the land where the studio now sits, "We used to come out and walk the trails (on the property) once a week no matter the weather. We both fell in love with the area and said, 'Hey, what if we open a tattoo business out here?'"

Leanne and Mike are no strangers to the industry. Leanne specializes in piercing and Mike, tattoos - together they founded and continue to operate the successful studio, Tantrix, in Saskatoon. They have developed a very strong and loyal clientele from across the province. "Many of our clients come from PA and La Ronge," says Leanne. "It's more convenient and a lot of our clients prefer to come to the lake." Catalyst has more of a destination feel to it and clients are loving the peaceful atmosphere. The studio is private, it has big windows and an open air concept that contributes to a more relaxed experience. Leanne and Mike are finding they are able to spend more one on one time with clients, and are able to add those personal touches with things like refreshments, snacks, the option to go for a hike, visit the chickens, or just enjoy the beautiful view. Next year you may even be able to take a dip in the pool! "Clients have mentioned that time seems to go by quicker out here," says Leanne - which would be a good thing considering what they are undertaking! Leanne reflects on the trust that clients place in them, and how sometimes a session is a life changing experience. "Tattoos don't always have to have meaning, but when they do - memorial tattoos, like when a parent loses a child, are by far the most significant. Thank you for letting us do that - it is a huge honour!"

The Lakeland area is home to a number of quality businesses of which Cataclysm is now a part of. When asked to think of a word that past clients would use to describe their business, Leanne was quick to answer, "cleanliness - we are beyond clean!": The shop was built to Association of Professional Piercers (APP) standards - the highest quality of very specific standards in the piercing industry. Once their membership is finalized, they will be the only APP studio in the entire province!

If you find yourself considering your first tattoo or piercing, here are some words of advice from the pro's:

If you have always wanted a tattoo then get one, they do not have to have any meaning it can simply be something you like. Ensure you are one hundred percent okay with the design and if you are not, say something to your artist - they will change it. Reference photos are a must and every artist has a style, don't assume it is yours, check their portfolios.

Mike and Leanne Thompson-Hill,
Owners Cataclysm Tattoo & Piercing

For a piercing, if you are nervous feel free to bring someone you find calming and supportive. Make sure to eat before any service. Make sure you understand the healing commitment involved and always seek out piercers who use high quality jewelry (Neo metal, anatometal, infinite, etc.) and follow APP standards.

Cataclysm has a presence on the web, Facebook and Instagram - be sure to check them out and welcome one of the newest local businesses to the area (see ad for details)!

Lakeland Life is a Bowl of Cherries

Faces of the Lakeland gives you a glimpse into the lives of local people in and around the Lakeland Area who contribute to the vitality of our communities!

By Jacquie Moore

When I first called the Frandsen Sour Cherry U-Pick Orchard to speak to Dan and Judy, Judy wasn't there. As a volunteer with the Canadian Red Cross, she was helping wildfire evacuees from the community of Southend. Once she's home again, we connect by phone. Judy then explains: "I'm with the Emergency Response Team, we were helping find accommodations, food, clothing, providing money cards or vouchers and general information like where to get laundry done ... just anything to help the beneficiaries to be as comfortable as possible while they're away from home." The last time Judy was involved with the Emergency Response Team was February of 2020 when 122 Canadians were repatriated after being stuck on the Diamond Princess Cruise quarantined in Japan due to an outbreak of Covid-19. "But they had to quarantine for two weeks when they got here so I helped out with that particular one," says Judy. "It's a volunteer position, but the Red Cross pays your expenses."

Judy is a retired nurse. Her husband Dan is retired from a 33-year career with Parks Canada. "I was a biologist for a lot of years," Dan says. "Well, park warden and a biologist." His job took them to different parks in western Canada. "We were up north in Inuvik in the early 90s when our kids were young, then we moved here to Christopher Lake in 1994." It was then that they bought their home in the Lakeland countryside. Dan worked for Prince Albert National Park and starting in 1999, Judy worked as a nurse in P.A. In 2009, the couple both returned to Inuvik to work, Dan as a Resource Conservation Manager. By then, they had a long-term vision for their Lakeland home.

"The plan was to have something to do once we retired," says Dan. "So we started planting the cherry orchard in 2008, five years before I retired. We had an enclosure with game fencing around it. When the seedlings are young they're only a stick or two, so you don't want the deer et cetera nibbling on them - you would never get ahead of them," he chuckles. "So we started this orchard inside this fence, we planted 100-plus seedlings a year, different varieties of sour cherries. We kept adding to it. When we were stationed up north in Inuvik for those last three and a half years, we'd come back in the fall and continue planting for a week or two. By the time I retired in 2013, the orchard was pretty much planted but still young and growing. We started selling our first cherries that year but production was pretty small at that time. The orchard has matured since then; some years it's pretty good now!" Dan says they have over 500 bushes inside a five-acre fence.

It was the Bruno Cherry Festival that inspired the couple to start their own orchard. "Sour cherries for the prairies were developed in Saskatoon at the U of S," explains Dan, "so they're hardy for the climate in Saskatchewan. Because they're a new hybrid species, they're not susceptible to many pests. That made it possible to raise them organically - we wanted to do that. So we chose to grow cherries because they're hardy ... and they taste good! They're not quite as sweet as the BC cherries but they're way more flavourful. They're great for eating out of hand, but also for making all sorts of things: sauces, juice, jelly, jams, wines, beer ..." Judy lists off some of the baking uses for the cherries: pies, pound cakes, muffins, loaves, upside down cakes. "There's actually a U of S sour cherry cookbook with hundreds of recipes in it," Dan says. "They add them to meat, make chutneys out of them, all kinds of things."

Judy makes juice from the cherries and freezes it for customers. "I also use the juice to make a jelly," she says. "It's just so good on toast or biscuits or bread, but it's also good with cheese as an hors d'oeuvre. It's got a little tart taste that compliments the cheese. If people are interested, they just order through me and I will make it for them."

So does the orchard get lots of u-pickers? "Yeah, it's gradually built every year," says Dan, "and last year with Covid, it was super popular. We didn't have a big crop last year either, so we were only open about five days last year. The u-pickers came in droves and just picked us clean! We barely got enough for ourselves," he laughs. "But normally we run for a couple of weeks, or thereabouts. This year the cherries are a little bit early so we expect they'll be ready by the August long weekend."

Their Facebook page - Frandsen Sour Cherry U-Pick Orchard - is where to find out when they're open, and any specials they might have. "I posted a bunch of pictures on the Facebook page in early June because it was a really good spring for blooms," says Dan. "The flowers only last about a week though; it's all over before you know it."

The cherry blossom pictures are beautiful - it seems to me that getting married among those flowers during that precious week or two would be magical. "Well yes, they are actually called 'Romance' cherries!" laughs Judy. Dan explains that the names of this line of cherries all have a romantic theme to them. "There are Juliets and Romeos and Cupids ..." The spring blossom photos also include some pics of the pollinators: butterflies and bees. "A friend of ours, Shannon Poppy, has beehives in the orchard to help with the pollination," Dan says. "She has five hives this year - she calls her honey 'cherry blossom honey.' I have tasted it; it's delicious."

But it's not all fairytales running a cherry orchard. "Oh, all the pruning, there's a lot of pruning I have to do!" Dan laughs. "And the pocket gophers are a problem. They like to eat the roots, so I have to make sure I don't have any right inside the orchard. They killed a lot of plants when the plants were young; they're not as lethal now that the plants are bigger." Judy says that Dan is a very proficient pocket gopher trapper. Dan chuckles: "There's still lots of pocket gophers out in the field, but I don't like them in my orchard."

And the upsides? "On a nice sunny day, it's just a nice place to be in the orchard," says Dan. "It's kind of quiet, meditative. It's got forest all around it, so all you can see is our own hay field and it's quiet ... fairly pretty. We've had people have picnics out there while they're picking!"

The Frandsen Orchard is just off the 263, on Dochylo Road. Hours are 8 am to 8 pm daily until the cherries are gone.

A MOTH

A moth saw the candle flame,
Believed it burned eternally,
While flying around, in search of fame,
Felt drawn to it.

Sometimes the Moth when flying near,
And feeling the heat,
Would sense some fear,
But freedom of flying,
To the Moth was dear,
Flitting about without a care,
Had no thoughts of dying here.

As time went by,
The moth did think,
What if the eternal glow,
And he were linked?
So, closer he would fly,
And each time he'd pass wondered,
Will the next time be my last?

The feeling grew stronger,
For him to do,
What he knew most Moths have done,
Play the flame fly-through game,
No moth had every won.

As he closed his eyes,
To fly his last,
Like a golden egg through crystal glass,
An idea was born,
And the moth flew past!

Rejecting playing the fly-through game,
Fighting the feelings to be the same,

A new sense of life the moth had gained,
Never flying into the flame.

gardens that grow

Jacquie Swiderski is a well-known, source of local information about all things that grow! Check out Jacquie's tips and tricks for successful gardening in the Lakeland area.

HARVEST

After all the work of planting, weeding, watering, we can now reap the rewards.

PEAS: To get the most flavour and nutrients from your peas, pick, shell, and eat or blanch for the freezer as quickly as possible. If you must interrupt at any stage of the process, keep the product cold until you proceed.

BEANS: Never pick beans while the plants are wet. That encourages the growth and spread of fungus. You will have fewer followup pickings. I have found that it is better to slightly over-blanch beans rather than under blanching them. Under blanched beans discolour in the freezer and are much less palatable. Blanching times are listed in some cookbooks and on the Internet. Always plunge blanched vegetables into ice water to cool rapidly and thoroughly. I spread mine on a clean dry tea towel before bagging in the freezer.

ONIONS: Pull your onions before any heavy frosts. Let them 'cure' in at least three days of sunshine. I put mine under the eave of the garage on the cement pad. Then if hit by a sudden shower they stay dry. Some years I drag them in and out of the garage many times ensuring they stay dry and unfrosted. Leave the green steps on until they are well cured. Pull off easily removable dry leaves but do not cut them off. Cut edges allow bacteria to enter the bulb. If the weather is cloudy and rainy I let them dry inside my garage for two weeks or more. Then I put them away in open boxes or onion bags into my root cellar. I sort out bulbs damaged by onion maggots or otherwise flawed onions. I use those first, since they spoil quicker. Look through the whole lot periodically eliminating soft or rotting bulbs.

TOMATOES: Tomatoes will ripen if stored at room temperature. Pick before any frost, handling gently. Layer in boxes, not more than three deep. Excess product can be made into salsa, pasta sauces, canned or frozen. Some people even choose to dehydrate the more solid Roma varieties.

As with potatoes, tomato vines must be carried off the garden. They harbour diseases, fungus and insects that will affect next years crop if left over winter. Blight has become a serious problem in recent years. Planting resistant varieties, rotating the location of plants and removing trash helps minimize damage. Giving lots of air space to plants helps.

It Becomes a Part of You

Being at the lake with family and friends creates the kind of memories that last a lifetime. Memories of relaxation and adventure, exploration and peacefulness. Added to this are the smells of the forest, the feel of the wind on the water, the sounds of the landscape... all permanently ingrained in one's memory.

There is no one who knows this better than Cam Forrester, landscape painter, retired golf professional and club manager, and former architectural draftsman. Cam does most of his painting and sketching outdoors. He has painted from mountaintops in the Yukon, carried a 50-pound pack on his back, hiked and painted in streams, painted under tarps in the snow under the watchful eye of Bald Eagles. He has painted sunrises and sunsets from boats and canoes in the spectacular Saskatchewan landscape. "It's not just about the paint, it's the sheer joy of being in the moment and having the ability to capture the wild outdoors on canvas," notes Cam.

In 2020, Black Spruce Gallery facilitated a trip to Prince Albert National Park for Cam and the Men Who Paint, a group of five painters who began painting together in 2007. Inspired by the work and adventurous spirit of the early Canadian painters, the Men Who Paint have a preference for painting outside. Their journey to this area took them to may iconic locations in the park. They have also painted extensively in the greater Lakeland area.

If this incredible landscape that we know as Lakeland and Prince Albert National Park has become a part of you, visit Black Spruce Gallery, Waskesiu or blacksprucegallery.ca to see original fine art that inspires, intrigues, and celebrates all that this area has to offer.
